Welcome to The Project Compass, Project Management Global's (PMG's) new dedicated space for career insight, guidance and professional growth

By David McLoughlin, Chairman, Business Daily Group

Over more than four decades working within teams on major projects, I have seen first-hand both the challenges and the opportunities that define our profession. Whether delivering infrastructure programmes worth billions, or supporting smaller but no less vital initiatives, one truth remains constant: success depends on people. Talented, ambitious and resilient project professionals are the engine behind every milestone achieved.

Yet I also know how demanding and isolating this profession can be. Careers can stall. Development can slow. Many professionals tell me they feel uncertain about their next step or lack the support and encouragement to truly reach their potential. That is why we created PMG and why The Project Compass is such an important part of our mission.

PMG is not just a newsletter; it is a global platform designed to empower project professionals at every stage of their journey.

We provide access to the best ideas, skills and resources from across the profession. We highlight role models and leaders whose stories inspire. We showcase innovators and change-makers who prove what is possible. Above all, we aim to help you unlock your own potential – to become the project leader you are capable of being.

Our vision is simple: a profession where more projects succeed, where practitioners feel supported in their growth and where the collective expertise of millions of project managers worldwide drives lasting transformation in society.

At The Project Compass, you will find:

- Role models whose careers illuminate the pathways available.
- Actionable guidance on the skills, habits and mindsets that lead to success.
- Opportunities to connect with like-minded professionals and mentors.
- Insights and intelligence to keep you ahead in a rapidly changing field.

PMG is not just a newsletter; it is a global platform designed to empower project professionals at every stage of their journey.

This is why PMG is the place to be. It is where project professionals come together to learn, to share and to grow. With more than 150,000 subscribers and a network reaching millions worldwide, we are building one of the most powerful professional communities in our field.

My commitment, and the commitment of our entire team at Business Daily Group, is to ensure this platform continues to serve you. We want PMG to be your trusted partner, wherever you are in your career. Together, we can create a profession where more people thrive, more projects succeed and more of the world's ambitions become a reality.

The Project Compass will guide the way.
